

More Finials at St Kitts

In our last newsletter Brian Hennig acquainted us with the small brick or stone cairns at the top of the walls at the corners of some houses at St Kitts. We called them finials. We asked if anyone knew whether this had any significance for the Wendish settlers there, or whether anyone had seen them on houses in other districts.

I haven't had any response from others, but Brian has shown me photos of the same feature on other houses at St Kitts. Here they are:

Peter Zwar's house

Jenke house

Another house at St Kitts